Important: The security of the remote machine that is being used to make the connection cannot be assured. Therefore, there is an increased risk of data being compromised. Also, it is very easy to inadvertently end up with sensitive University data on a personal machine which is a violation of several University IT policies.

Recent changes in privacy laws may place the end user in a situation in which he/she is legally liable for any sensitive data that may be inadvertently exposed. Each user will need to determine if the risks outweigh the benefits in their situation.
